Proving His Case.
(From the Pittsburgh Dispatch.)

The students of the West Virginia University who burned the effigy of their president on account of his rulings against the brutal features of football seem bent on proving the need of sharp measures to teach them how to act like gentlemen.

A Timely Suggestion.
(From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.)

The President's suggestion that we shall fight our own passions, appetites and follies is timely. It comes near enough to the holidays to be seriously considered.

WILLIAM TRAVERS JEROME.

HE WILL SERVE FOUR YEARS MORE.

Wm Travers Jerome

"MY ELECTION A LESSON TO THE BOSSES."—JEROME.

"I was certain that the people would not back up the attempt of the bosses to force me from office. Coming as it does straight from the hands of the people, in spite of the opposition of bosses and machines, my election is peculiarly gratifying.

"The District-Attorney's office will go on for four years more under my direction under the same system that has prevailed for four years.

"There is nothing more to be said, save that it was a test of strength between corrupt bosses on one side and an aroused public opinion on the other. There is no trifling with the people when they have been roused, and my election is a lesson that the bosses will not soon forget.

WILLIAM TRAVERS JEROME."

OTHER STATES SETTLE BITTER FIGHTS AT POLLS

Republicans Claim Massachusetts, and Gorman Behind in Maryland.

Full State tickets were voted in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Ohio and Virginia to-day, while minor, although important elections, were held in various States, where the issues were fought bitterly.

Pennsylvania was a fierce battleground, with Philadelphia the storm center. The general fight was for State Treasurer, with the Democrats and Progressives united on William H. Berry, who was opposed by J. Lee Plummer, the Republican candidate.

In Philadelphia the reformers, headed by Mayor Weaver under the banner of the City party, gave the machine Republicans a warm tussle on local questions. To-night the reformers claim the city by a majority, estimated at the way from 60,000 to 100,000.

Berry was given strong support in the State, and his backers were hopeful of his election.

Massachusetts Republicans claim the State for Curtis Guild, Jr., and Eben S. Draper for Governor and Lieutenant.

Draper for Governor and Lieutenant, respectively by a solid majority. Bartlett and Whitney, the Democratic candidates, ran away behind the vote that Gov. Douglas received two years ago.

Rhode Island's vote was very close, Gov. Utter, the Republican, and ex-Gov. Garvin, the Democrat, both claiming victory.

Gov. Herrick was out heavily in Ohio, but the election of John M. Patterson, on the Democratic ticket was not conceded.

Majority of 5,000. "The Democratic by a majority of 5,000."

Maryland Democrats united with Republicans in voting against Senator Jormal's constitutional amendment, that practically disfranchises negro voters, and the indications are that it was defeated.

DEMOCRATS ELECT MAYORS UP-STATE.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 7.—J. N. Adam, Democrat, has been elected Mayor by 5,981.

ROME, N. Y., Nov. 7.—Albert R. Kessinger, Democrat, has been elected Mayor of Rome by 171 majority over Dr. T. G. Nook Republican, the present Mayor, whose majority two years ago was 18.

Mr. Kessinger is a son of A. C. Kessinger and is the managing editor of the Rome Daily Sentinel.

AMSTERDAM, N. Y., Nov. 7.—J. H. Dealey, Democrat, is elected Mayor of Amsterdam by a majority of 35. The rest of the Republican ticket in city and county is victorious.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Nov. 7.—D. W. Cahill, Republican, was elected Mayor of Watertown over C. W. Clark, Democrat, by a majority of 35.

AUBURN, N. Y., Nov. 7.—Thomas M. Osborne, Democrat, has been defeated for Mayor by 376 plurality.

REPUBLICANS LEAD IN RHODE ISLAND.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 7.—Two polling districts out of 15 in the wards of Rhode Island give Utter (Rep.) 211.

Garvin (Dem.) 190. Last year the vote was: Utter (Rep.) 341, Garvin (Dem.) 283. Net gain for Utter 50.

Geo B McClellan

M'CLELLAN HAD NO DOUBT HE WOULD BE RE-ELECTED.

"I never doubted that I would be re-elected. I was content to rest on the unerring judgment of the American people, which is not to be swayed by false pretense. My two years of administration was sufficient guarantee to the people that I would keep my promises. They believed in me and have chosen me as their chief executive again.

"As I predicted early in the campaign, attempts to divert the public mind from the real issues confronting the people failed.

"GEORGE B. M'CLELLAN."

YOUNG LOUIS FITZGERALD'S AWFUL DEATH

Run Over at Great Neck by Train as He Bade Friends Adieu.

Louis G. Fitzgerald, son of Gen. Fitzgerald, the multi-millionaire railroad magnate, was mangled to death this evening at the Great Neck station on the Long Island Railroad in the presence of a party of the Vanderbilts and many of his society friends.

Young Mr. Fitzgerald, who was a member of the Rockaway Hunt Club, the Meadowbrook Hunt Club and a crack polo player, was returning to this city after having taken part in the annual ymckhana games of the Hamstead colony at Great Neck.

He had won several prizes in the games and was in fine spirits when he arrived at the Great Neck station. Most of the society folk who had attended the games had driven into the station in their automobiles to see their friends off, and the station platform was crowded.

The train drew in and scores of men and women climbed into the cars. Mr. Fitzgerald was at the southern end of the platform and remained in conversation with several women until after the train started.

Then waving his hand to them in farewell he ran toward the front platform of the first car. The train was under way at the time. The young man slipped the iron grating of the first car, turning halfway round to wave a final adieu to his friends.

There was a sudden jerk of the train and he was thrown forward. His crisp frock and his body swung around on the rails, falling under the wheels of the locomotive tender and the forward truck of the first car. His body was mangled to pieces.

Immediately there was an indescribable scene of confusion on the station platform. A dozen society women who had witnessed the tragedy swooned, and men, in their excitement trampled upon them. The engineer of the train had no warning of the accident until the entire train had passed over Mr. Fitzgerald's body, when it was too terribly crushed that the few women who had not been alarmed by the accident and saw it falling on the platform.

Physicians were summoned from all over the section to attend to the women, many of whom were in hysterics after reviving from their fainting fit. Women in the train, friends of Mr. Fitzgerald, when they learned of his awful death fainted in the cars.

M'CLELLAN VOTE JUST ENOUGH TO PULL HIM THROUGH

Hearst Manages to Save His Followers on County Ticket in Kings.

In a contest of ballots between the counties of New York and Kings George B. McClellan was reelected Mayor of New York. He carried the New York County ticket with him, including Osborne, who displayed surprising strength.

Hearst carried Brooklyn, and took his county ticket along, but his plurality was not large enough to overcome that roled up for McClellan by Tammany Hall in Manhattan and the Bronx.

Ivins polled a phenomenal vote. The straight Republican ballots cast for him in Brooklyn went a long way toward insuring the election of McClellan.

SURPRISING JEROME SLUMP.

Mr. Jerome appears to have gone down to overwhelming defeat. Early figures showed him to be amazingly weak, and he did not gain in strength as the returns piled up.

After the newspapers had conceded the election of McClellan, Mr. Hearst was shown the figures at his headquarters in the Hoffman House. He refused to admit that he was beaten, saying that the election was too close to justify any advance forecasting, and that the result would show him elected by a very small plurality.

Figuring on the returns was a most perplexing operation. There have been 400 election districts added to those in the city two years ago, and the basis of comparison was not accurate. For the first two hours it was anybody's race, and the calculations at the headquarters of all the candidates were able to produce figures showing victory.

The first returns came from Brooklyn and showed a surprising strength for Ivins. From the vote in the first twenty election districts it appeared that the Republican candidate had an excellent chance of election. Then the Hearst figures began to loom up and it was soon apparent that the Municipal Ownership principle had been overwhelmingly endorsed by the people in Brooklyn who own their own homes and by the flat dwellers, who pay exorbitant bills for poor gas.

Tammany Hall was in the depths of gloom until the returns began to arrive from the election precincts in the Borough of Manhattan. For the first time McClellan appeared to have a chance. The vote showed that the Tammany organization had succeeded in getting out an enormous vote; that Ivins was not running up to his Brooklyn form in Manhattan and the Bronx, and that Hearst was the only contender with a chance against McClellan.

It was anybody's race after the returns from 200 districts were in. Hearst showed surprising strength in certain portions of Manhattan and surprising weakness in others. His percentage of votes per election district was so irregular that none but the most optimistic Tammany rooters could see hope in them until there was a total in sight big enough to warrant the belief that McClellan would certainly carry Manhattan and the Bronx.

Returns on the vote for District-Attorney in New York County were slow in arriving. From the start they showed a Jerome weakness. They indicated the election of Osborne by a stiff plurality.

Interpreted with the election returns from Police Headquarters came information that the Jerome watchers at the polling places in several districts were in trouble, and that police assistance had been telegraphed for. In Abington Square Jerome watchers refused to allow the ballot boxes to be removed and the reserves were called out.

Former Alderman and Leadership Aspirant Succumbs to Lingerling Illness.

Former Alderman George A. Burrell, who fought hard last year and this to wrest the Tammany leadership from Harry Hart and William H. Sinnott, died this afternoon at his mother's home, No. 170 East Eighty-seventh street. He had been ill for more than a year.

Burrell was a popular idol in the Thirtieth and it is generally believed that he would have been elected at the recent primary if there had been any assurance that his health would not fail him. As it was, Burrell dictated the greater part of his campaign from a sick bed in the Adirondacks and rolled up a surprising vote.

The young Alderman was the first one who had the nerve to challenge the methods of Harry Hart, who had reigned more as a czar than as a leader of the Thirtieth Assembly District for years. Hart defeated Burrell by a small margin at the 1904 primary, and, seeing the temper of the Democratic constituency, resigned in favor of William H. Sinnott, the present leader.

Burrell was born in New York City thirty-nine years ago. He was a member of the Columbian Order, the Argentinian Club, "Ourselves," "Ostriches," "Conductors' Club," Pastime Athletic Club and of the Young Men's Democratic Club of the Thirtieth District. He was an umbrella manufacturer and president of the George A. Burrell Association.
